Is there a future for radio?

Yes

No

Can it survive in isolation?

Yes

No

Thank You!

Questions?

Actually there's no future for radio...

- ◆ ...in analogue isolation
- ◆ But a HUGE future for audio on several platforms, especially when they mutually interact

Hurrah for Disruptive Thinking

- ◆ Countless business would have died without disruptive thinking.
 - Light
 - Telephony
 - Photography
 - Why not broadcasting?

Car Makers

- ◆ Toyota – Cost
- ◆ Tap creativity from suppliers through creative friction.
- ◆ Long term relationships
- ◆ Encourages collaboration & conversations
- ◆ Quick problem solving
- ◆ GM – Price
- ◆ Top down total design.
- ◆ No incentive to share ideas– GM will share them with your cheaper competitors.

US Radio Payola Scandals

By BRIAN ROSS

Feb. 9, 2006 — Hundreds of radio stations are under investigation by the Federal Communications Commission in the payola scandal rocking the music industry, ABC has learned.

Intro

Technology is turning what we once thought of as radio into something broader — listening.

And listening will increasingly occur across a range of devices, from computers to PDAs and cell phones, from satellite receivers to new high- definition radios.

The strategies of programmers for winning audiences and revenue in this new landscape for the moment range the gamut — everything from ultra-niche programming to the broad eclecticism of letting computers randomly select music from all formats at once.

We even see competing trends in ownership. While some companies continue to consolidate, at least one major player in radio is moving to break in two.

As all this occurs, several questions that might have been inconceivable just a few years ago are now worth asking.

Will traditional or "terrestrial" radio fade as new technologies replace it? Or will all the old media merely be supplemented by the new, with each commanding less of people's time? If that occurs, what will it mean about the resources of radio newsgathering if there are fewer people listening, or listening for less time each day? The answers may be profoundly influenced by new ways of measuring audiences that could topple the traditional foundation upon which radio advertising rates and economics are built.

Already radio news has changed from something that was once heavily local and widely available to something that exists largely on select stations specifically formatted for news and talking content.

After decades of growth, public radio's share has not increased since 2003. Its loss of upward share momentum suggests a decreased ability by its programming to compete.

AN HISTORIC LOSS OF MOMENTUM

As less US citizens listened to radio, relatively more listened to public radio.

But that growth has stalled at a mere 5% of all radio listening and is now declining...

Has it become unsustainable already?

Trapped By Routine

- ◆ The world is changing though the influence of several kinds of cheap, ubiquitous communication....
- ◆ The problem is not “new” media, it’s the legacy of the old that refuses to sign-off!

Trapped By Routine Excuses

- ◆ Haven't got time for the future, I am on the air in an hour.
- ◆ I don't have extra time/money to experiment
- ◆ The suits upstairs will figure it out?
- ◆ I don't know/care who listens
- ◆ It's so much easier to do nothing

Delusion

- ◆ I have (had) millions of listeners

The image shows a vintage Pilot radio tuner dial, a classic piece of mid-20th-century electronic equipment. The dial is circular, with a dark wood-grain frame and a white face. It features concentric scales for frequency in MHz, kHz, and meters. The central needle points to the selected frequency. The dial is mounted on a dark wood panel, and four large, ornate knobs are visible at the bottom. The background is a dark wood panel.

PODCASTEN: EEN HANDLEIDING VOOR PARTICULIEREN

Ik wil muziek gebruiken in mijn podcast. Wat moet ik doen?

Bent u een particulier, dan moet u auteursrechtelijke toestemming verkrijgen bij Buma/Stemra (zie www.bumastemra.nl) en bij de maatschappij die het muziekstuk dat u wilt gebruiken heeft uitgegeven.

Hoe weet ik welke maatschappij dat is?

Als u een cd heeft, kijkt u op het hoesje. Daar staat de maatschappij op vermeld.

Als u een track heeft gedownload via, bijvoorbeeld iTunes, kunt u op die site vinden welke platenmaatschappij u moet hebben. Daarnaast kunt u altijd zoeken op internet naar de site van de uitvoerende artiest, die meestal beheerd wordt door de betreffende platenmaatschappij. Via onze ledenlijst kunt u zien hoe u in contact komt met deze maatschappij.

Ik kan de maatschappij met geen mogelijkheid vinden. Wat nu?

Als u er echt niet uitkomt, stuurt u een mailtje naar info@nvpi.nl.

Wat gebeurt er als ik geen toestemming vraag?

Als u muziek aanbiedt zonder dat daar toestemming voor is, handelt u onrechtmatig.

De wet maakt het de rechthebbenden mogelijk een schadevergoeding te eisen.

Podcasts cannot

- ◆ Deliver breaking news...on demand to device not streaming
- ◆ be used like a blog. Finite number of hours for listening.
- ◆ Not as easy to scan what you want and send that bit to someone else. I scan 80 blogs, listen to 1 or 2 podcasts per day.

Podcasting still niche?

- ◆ Biased (now) towards younger males.
- ◆ Tech savvy to work out how to do it
- ◆ 1% podcasts have 100,000 downloads per show. Most have more people making it than listening...
- ◆ Producer pays for the bandwidth!!

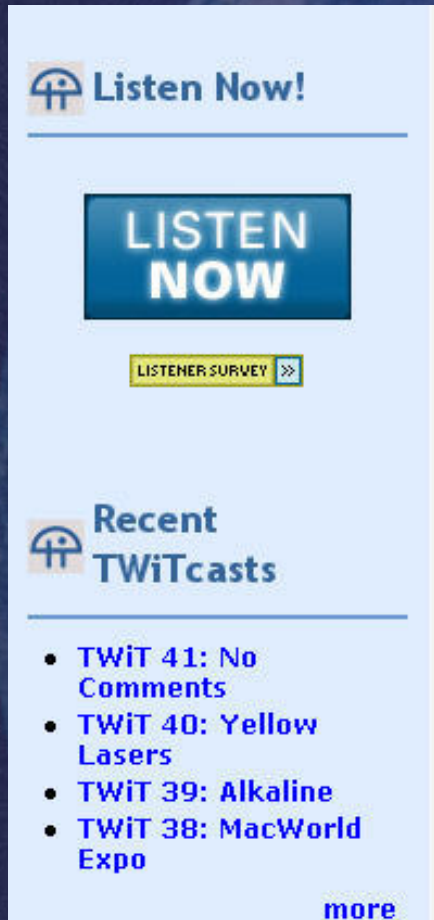

The Extremes

- ◆ “Everyone is their own broadcaster. Give them equipment and they will make their own shows. Nope...
- ◆ Broadcasting will remain the way it is for my lifetime. This is an out-of-business model

Some results after 18 months

- ◆ Shake out already starting
- ◆ “podfading” affecting some people “being original is a lot of work”
- ◆ Most have only a few hundred listeners. Top shows, like TWiT, have 233,000 downloads PER show, using 1 GB of bandwidth.

Apple preparing low-cost iPods for market

By Kasper Jade
Published: 12:00 PM EST

Apple's iPod has become an undisputed success story over the past two calendar years. Stock of digital music players have been flying off store shelves during the holiday season, with many retail United Kingdom and US citing short supply. However, with a base price of $299 for a 10GB model, accessible to everyone.

In October, company CEO, Steve Jobs, acknowledged the pricey drawbacks of the iPod in an interview. "We'd love to have a $100 iPod! We just don't know how to do it right now," Jobs said. "We're considering cheaper iPods. We're working on the next step." According to the usual suspects, the 'next step' is expected at January's Macworld Expo.

Albeit unconfirmed, sources with proven track-records claim that a pair of low-cost iPod music players are amongst the many closely guarded secrets at Apple's 1 Infinite Loop, Cupertino campus. The pocket-sized models are said to exist in both 2 and 4GB configurations and will carry a very modest price tag as compared to the company's current offerings, though no specifics were available.

Rumors of the low-cost Apple iPods began to sizzle after successive reports from AppleTune and MacRumors hit the Web earlier this

Aim of this Broadcasters Tsunami Response Subsite

Hello, thanks for your continued interest.

Last month, Monday March 28th 2005, news came of another major earthquake in the region of Indonesia. The main part of this wiki and the Tsunami weblog <http://tsunamihelp.blogspot.com/> will update you on the news of the aftermath. This Broadcasters wiki will concentrate on keeping you up to date on how various organisations around the world have reacted to help broadcasters affected by the December 26th Earthquake and Tsunami, as well as the material damage caused by the earthquake on March 28th 2005.

Earthquake and Tsunami damage has put many smaller stations in the Indian Ocean region off the air and rebuilding work has only really just started. It would appear that media (both radio and TV) responded better during the earthquake on March 28th, but full response systems won't be in place until later in the year. During the March tsunami alert, the following All India Radio stations were noted with special broadcasts throughout the night.

Chennai 4920, 720 kHz Hyderabad 4800, 738 kHz Port Blair 4760 kHz Visakhapatnam 927 kHz Vijayawada 837 kHz

The 8.7 magnitude quake struck just after 11 pm local time on March 28th about 90 kilometres off Sumatra's western coast, and just north of Nias Island. The quake hasn't produced the kind of tsunamis that killed tens-of-thousands in the region in December. Thailand and Sri Lanka both issued tsunami warnings, but they were recalled shortly afterwards. The International Red Cross in Geneva said all their terrestrial mobile phone systems went down immediately following the quake and so they weren't able to talk to anyone in Indonesia. Early reports on [Radio Australia <http://www.abc.net.au/ra/>] said at least 80 per cent of all multi-storey buildings in the island's main city, Gunung Sitoli, have been destroyed and that thousands of people have been trapped under the rubble.

Over one-third of those killed by the Indian Ocean tsunami were children; 1 million more were injured or have lost family. There is clearly a role for broadcasters aiming to educate in the

Nigerian Blogs round-up

Sub-Saharan Africa, Nigeria, Weblog

The Nigerian blogosphere this week is again not unconnected to the ongoing MTN African Cup of Nations (Egypt 2006).

Chippa starts the discourse when with this assertion:

"The 25th African Cup of Nations 2006 has been on in Egypt since January 20, 2006. When one looks at the teams still left in the tournament, which is currently in the quarterfinals stage, one cannot but weep about Africa's anticipated performance in the forthcoming World Cup in Germany later this year.

Of the five African nations that qualified for the World Cup 2006-Tunisia, the Ivory Coast, Ghana, Togo and Angola-only two are currently left in the tournament. Ghana, Togo and Angola simply could not make it through the first round."

Grandiose Parlour points to a bridge building project in Anhambra State in the East of Nigeria that was completed in only 60 days. The bridge "is 264 feet long and can carry a 3-ton vehicle. The most amazing fact is the construction was done without any heavy equipment! The only mechanized assistance came from a Chinese-made bulldozer used to grade the access road to the bridge."

Bloggers

(Cartoon by Nick Anderson, The Louisville Courier-Journal)

Over 100 Million (active) blogs?

Australia: approx 450,000
Canada: approx 700,000
China 6 million, possibly more at this stage.

France: approx 3.5 million

Germany: 300,000

India: approx 100,000

Iran: 110,000

Italy: approx 250,000

Japan: at least 5.5 million

Malaysia: approx 20,000

The Netherlands: approx 600,000

Russia: approx 400,000

United Kingdom: 2.5 million

United States: approx 30-50 million

March 2006

Are bloggers independent?

Are bloggers journalists?

- ◆ Some are, most not (2-98%)
- ◆ In UK, France, Iran, USA having influence. If someone has to resign because of a blog, mainstream media take notice.
- ◆ Some blogs good source, dangerous just to cut and paste. Usually source rulings apply.
- ◆ PROAMs often better informed than commercial or government.

Broadcast & Military

What happens when a citizen journalist gets hurt?

Creating Conversations Summer 2006

- ◆ MSN has contracted top footballers to write blogs during the WK in 2006
- ◆ Includes Edgar Davids, Ronaldinho de Assis Moreira (Brazil), Michael Owen (England), Gianluigi Buffon (Italy), They won't write it themselves, just share it with ghost writers.
- ◆ Looking for 10m unique visitors on the 7 weblogs.

Some basic predictions

- ◆ Analogue MF/HF audiences anywhere will be negligible in 2010, FM in 2020.
- ◆ In less than 10 years, 80% of the European population will always be connected on line, anywhere, and with usable bandwidth for audio and video
- ◆ All major content (news, films, entertainment) will be available via this always-on network, illegally and legal.
- ◆ The music and other content will be stored on the network, or in an encrypted form on storage systems in the home/work
- ◆ Computer technology will have integrated seamlessly into other devices – including what we now term TV's, radios, VCRs.

So how does radio progress?

- ◆ Instead of waiting to see...
- ◆ Radio needs
 - to prepare several preferred futures in a multimedia context.
 - commit time and resources to get there
 - be seen as progressive medium, talk about the future as well as build on the past.

Action needed by coordinators like EBU

- ◆ As more events take on a multi-media nature and cross borders, how can EBU organise exchanges similar to Eurovision of radio's music exchanges?
- ◆ Who will help stations get their programme details into the emerging programme guides (iTunes) and stimulate open source initiatives? We do it for analogue freqs, but not for content.
- ◆ Where are the tool kits for the multimedia journalist? Where can potential producers/journalists turn to for independent advice?

Action needed by international broadcasters

- ◆ Be platform positive!
- ◆ Coordinated efforts to get good content into directories
- ◆ Cross-media production as the core business (not if we have time we'll post it)
- ◆ And....

Training for cross media producers!
